*"He wrote a playlet the other day in ten minutes. I quietly observed him writing as rapidly as he could; no changes. That seemed to me tremendous. He certainly has genius. He lacks the power to tie down to anything he doesn't relish, and so is barred from high achievements, I fear. And yet, genius has laws of its own."
Written by the father of Thornton Wilder in a letter to a family member on September 12, 1916.*

The Angel That Troubled the Waters was written by Thornton Wilder (1897-1975) in his late teens and first published in 1928. Wilder later became one of our most beloved and prolific American playwrights, most famous for OUR TOWN, THE MATCHMAKER and THE SKIN OF OUR TEETH.
